Overview

Why do you need offshore containers on oil and gas rigs?

On oil and gas platforms and oil rigs, the employees spend a very long time aboard. For this reason, enough space and a high level of comfort for the living quarters are important. Our offshore containers on oil and gas platforms and oil rigs can provide additional space.

Where can a container be used?

Containers are used on oil rigs, wind farms, and emergency stations for both short and long-term deployment. Options include flexible living cabins and workshop-living hybrids that boost on-site efficiency. MGS Offshore offers DNV-compliant, plug-and-play accommodation solutions tailored to offshore challenges.

What are offshore accommodation containers?

Given the physically and mentally demanding nature of offshore living, oil rig personnel require solutions that ensure worker comfort, safety, and morale. Offshore accommodation containers are such a modular, secure, and comfortable solution tailored to offshore living demands.

Why should an oil and gas platform have an office space?

The accommodation on an oil and gas platform should offer an office space in order to communicate with suppliers and the crew's employer headquarter. Our Offshore Office and Meeting Container offers furnishing for up to ten people, tables, chairs and storage units for unlimited productivity.
