Overview

What is a battery management system (BMS)?

Like lead-acid batteries, lithium batteries can be permanently damaged by overcharging, deep discharging, or extreme temperatures. That's where the Battery Management System (BMS) comes in. Often called the brain of the battery, the BMS ensures your batteries operate safely, efficiently, and for as long as possible. In this guide, we'll cover:

Why do lithium batteries need a BMS?

The BMS prevents your lithium battery's voltage from going too high (causing overheating and gas release) or too low (leading to permanent damage). Damage occurs if you overcharge (cell voltage gets too high) or over-discharge (cell voltage gets too low) a lithium-ion battery cell. Overcharging occurs when recharging exceeds a battery's safe range.

Do I need a battery management system?

For most RV, marine, and off-grid applications, an internal BMS is the safest and most convenient choice. Our team does not recommend purchasing a battery unless it has an internal battery management system. If you're running lithium batteries, a BMS isn't optional — it's essential.

Why is a battery management system important?

The BMS complies with the necessary approvals for shipping by road, train and plane (important for service and replacement). It also provides remote access to operating and service information. What and why of the BMS and Lithium (Li-Ion) battery. And is a Battery Management System needed?

The backgrounds and advantages.
